

Project Olympus
Bridging the Gap between
Cutting-Edge University Research and
Economy-Promoting Commercialization
For the Benefit of our Communities

You are invited to attend the inaugural

Olympus CONNECTS Leaders
Wednesday June 17, 3:30-6 p.m.
Newell Simon Hall, Room 3305
Carnegie Mellon University

Olympus CONNECTS Leaders is a collaboration between Carnegie Mellon University and the University of Pittsburgh. It was formed to introduce executives with start-up experience to faculty who are eager to partner to commercialize technology based upon their world-class research.

Several projects will be presented that are at the earliest stages of commercialization. A reception will follow where executives and faculty can discuss the projects and opportunities in more depth.

Olympus CONNECTS Leaders is an experiment to see if an environment can be created where faculty can freely interact with a pool of potential executives, and executives can more quickly assess whether a project is a good fit for their skills and experience.

Please RSVP to Hoda (hoda@cs.cmu.edu).
